

Stardust the story of us

Our story begins at the start of it all with a beautiful spark, powerful yet small, all by itself in a vast empty sea with dreams of the future and what it could be...

It started to stretch, then it started to grow Its tiniest pieces, they started to glow as they danced, and they spun, oh what a sight!
when they made the first stars to light up the night.

With stars came warmth, how it must have looked As inside, new atoms were baked and were cooked.
When they were ready, these stars would explode
To share all their stardust, as seeds to be sowed...

This Stardust had plans, such big dreams you see,
Grown quite grand from that sparks' energy.
With love at its core, Stardust was free And soon to become all that would be...

It formed into planets, moons, stars, our sun but life, as we know it, had not yet begun.
It had to make ready, our world to prepare For all of the creatures, that soon would live there

So, it turned into land, into skies, into seas, plants in our oceans, flowers and trees with roots to connect to the life-giving dirt, they spread through the land and clung to the earth.

Then Stardust decided, "I want so much more."
"Through the water I'll swim, through the air I shall soar!"
And it became birds, reptiles, mammals and fish to live as it wanted, to grant its own wish...

It grew into all sorts and manners of creatures with all kinds of textures, colours and features to explore and experience every sensation on this beautiful world, its own creation...

Now, as much as it loved to swim, fly and walk, Stardust decided it wanted to talk.
and since that was hard with a snout or a beak,
it had an idea for one that could speak!

This one would be different, on earth it would walk but also, would climb, run, jump, swim, and talk!
When more of its kind learned to work together, They'd fly in machines as light as a feather

With minds to imagine, voices to share knowledge, ideas and hearts that would care to help those who struggled to move, hear, were blind with love in their name, this new humankind

Becoming all people, all colours, all races,
And wanting to smile through so many faces,
It took on all shapes and all sizes to be
For Stardust adores variety...

It loved being human, it had so much fun,
Playing with friends in the warmth of the sun,
At night looking up at the stars high above Reminded how all that we know came from Love

For all it became Stardust never forgot How it danced, and it played in a star's melting pot.
All people, all creatures, our planet, our sun Always connected, forever as one

That spark of creation still lies within the core of each person and once we begin to see that it's there, it's our power to use, We'll make our dreams real, however we choose...

We can care for our planet, and for one another regardless of race we are sisters and brothers, building a world that fills us with pride using the power of our stardust inside.

We can leave our best work that will surely inspire those who come after, to reach even higher... proving why stardust, with all its might chose us as its dream and got us just right.

This story began and, though it is true,
it has not yet ended, but it has led to you,
So, live your whole life, shining brightly, you must!
As the stars you are made of

for you are Stardust...
